Interview Summary	In this interview four club officials from Clonea start by outlining the setting up of the hurling club in Clonea. Mick goes on to discuss the early victories for the club and the lean years that followed. He goes on to talk about John Cusack and his brothers. He then discusses the various families that were involved with the teams over the years and the role they played in the success of the club. He talks about the Meehan family who made the first hurleys in the county. He then talks about the various fields that the club played on over the years. He goes on to discuss mentors for the teams before talking about the club successes of the 1970's. Pat then talks about the teams of the 1990's and how they became the backbone of the intermediate team. He then speaks of the two local clubs one focussed on hurling and the other on football. Mick then talks of the changes in the club over the years and the development of facilities including a clubhouse. Pat mentions the challenging times for the club in terms of developments. He then discusses how he got involved in the club. Peter discusses his time as chairman and how he was influenced by his father. David then talks about playing at Junior level and his involvement since then as well as his work as chairman and his hope that the developments will continue. He goes on to talk about the importance of looking after the younger players. Pat talks about the work being done at underage level and the need for developing this to bridge the gap to adult levels. Mick speaks of the difficulty in organising games due to the level of bureaucracy involved. There then follows a discussion about the league style of the championships and how it means more work but insures more games for each player. Each of the panel then

	discusses the origin of their involvement in the GAA. Pat then talks of the place held by the club in the community. He then talks about the work required to keep the field in such a good condition. This leads to a discussion about the time and effort that volunteers have to put in to the club and what motivates them. There then follow a discussion on the importance of family support within the club. Pat talks about the role of women within the club after which speaks about the local Ladies Football team Comeragh Rangers. Mick then talks about what it means to be a good chairman and they each discuss their high and low points. Mick then talks about some of the famous people from Clonea including Sean Kelly. The interview ends with the 1952 County Final ball from Dungarvan. 00:48 Mick talks about the setting up of the hurling club by the Kirwan Brothers in 1902 in Clonea winning the Senior Championships in 1903, 1905 and 1907.
